Our social life, says the Philadelphia stood south. Had heavy weather while running eastward; hove to with sea anchor Ledger seems to be made up of a series of concentric circles, having self for their centre. The innermost circle is the family, with all its dear domestic ties, that form so large a part of all our enjoyments and obligations. Then comes a little larger circle of intimate friends and near relatives, such as business circles and associations for various objects. Hand, associations for various objects, environ most it was time we went on deck. He did not contain a few times and selections and associations for various objects, environ most it was time we went on deck. He did not contain a few times and selections are such as business circles and associations for various objects, environ most it was time we went on deck. He did not contain a second selection of the secon others, such as business circles and associations for various objects, environ most of us, while citizenship, petrictism, and universal philanthropy may be said to form the outer circle of all. To make a correct estimate of the proportion of time, thought and means which each of these relations justly claim from us, and to carry out that estimate in the daily practice of our lives, are aims worthy of life-long effort. Its complete fulfilment would be the perfection of our escal life. Proposition of the more common than that which regards these relations only with reference to their personal nearness. There are those who seem to exhaust all their resources and who have neither time nor energies left for outside claims. Others go a little farther, and observe also the demands of the boat. It was then Mur put his head duties just as far as they are in any way. duties just as far as they are in any way re-ated to their own business or pleasure, but ignore or forget those which are remote, such as citizenship, patriotism and philanthropy.

The fact of these outer circles of social life being the more distant, so far from toward the shore at a place called Kalibi Kai, about five miles from Haustei. universal benevolence. He who only cheriches affection for those with whom he intimately mingles, atifies a large part of his better nature. Public spirit in its true was Mair's and Andrews' discharge papers, sense, by uniting the interests of different classes, and preventing a narrow absorption in one-sided and personal objects, sims at the very root of selfishness. These public duties do not, of course, press upon all equally, or in the same bases upon all equally, or in the same bases and engage, and also manuer. Some have talents, and some influence. It is for each to consider whether he is apportioning them aright, or whether he is selfishly expending them wholly on private interests. Even those who possess these blessings in a very limited measure may yet bestow their synited measure may yet bestow their synited measure may yet bestow their synited in the properties of multiple welfare. who possess these blessings in a very liming one from the place I left him in. Soon ited measure may yet bestow their sympathies on matters of public welfare, I found him surrounded by several pathies on matters of public welfare, in the was dead and very black. There are also certain duties which, belong strictly to every citizen, which none can rightly ignore. Such is the duty of called Peter—and after resting myself, casting a vote for those who are honestly believed to be best calculated to fill public dities of trust and importance. This is believed to be best calculated to fill public offices of trust and importance. This is one of our distinctive national privileges, but it is none the less a peremptory duty, and one which no legal voter has any right to renounce. There are those who, while deprecating the evils that exist in the management of multiplication. while deprecating the evils that exist in the management of public affairs, yet stand aloof, and withhold the support and guidance that their influence might conter. Such conduct is not only inconsist.

wrong, if by any effort of our own we could help to subdue it.

It is true that every effort at self-improvement benefits others; every family rightly brought up bleases the State; every wirthous association well conducted, profits the whole community; every circle touches and influences the one outside it. Yet we are in direct relation to them all, and owe duties to each which cannot be shirked. It is doubtless possible for men to be so absorbed by public affairs, as to neglect those which lie close at home; but such men are often found to be, after all, working through public channels, only for personal aggrandizement. Those who exact themselves, not only for ulterior objects, but sincerely and earnestly, for the highest found neglecting their families or ignoring their friends. Pure motives and vigorous efforts in one relation of life will induce the same in all the others, and the best outzers and the truest particle will generally be found to be the most faithful parent and the most devoted friend.

THE French people must by this time have their eyes opened to their real situation. They must at least realize the folly of holding out any longer. They must see that the Provisional Government is as impotent as Napoleon and the National A VICTORY FOR GARIBALDI. armies no better than those of the Empire. Three months ago, had the nation made peace, how much of bloodshed and devastation would have been averted? But the people listened to blind guides and obstinate leaders, and instead of being delivered, their case is only more desperate, and their condition more miserable than over. The leaders stand now in peril of their lives from a people reckless, despondent and inflamed with disappointment and rage; and i it were not strange, it would be quite in accordance with the revolutionary precolents of France if the idols of yesterpopular violence and exasperation. Charter Amendments. litora Merning Herald :

Your remarks this morning upon the above, as discussed by the citizens Committee are in excellent spirit and meet the general approval. Doubtless every citizen and property holder is in favor of good and permanent pavements in our main thooughfare.

Daniel Webster being once called upon o preside at a "new road meeting, in his ppening remarks, said, "I am in favor of all roads except"-----here he was unable to think of any exception, when a friend at his elbow, seeing his dilemma, whiswas one of the unfortunate lad's shoes, and upon looking up to pered, "say the road to ruin." Webster catching the suggestion, repeated his first sentence, as if to make it more emphatic, saying, "I am in favor of all roads, except numerous shrads of his shirt and clothing, the United States, besides 23,103 tons or square timber.

This is a rapidly growing industry, notwithstanding the havoo that has been already made with our forests. Our timber supplies seem inexhaustible, a fact which is telting favorably supon the weath of Canada. The ravages of fire prove the greatest enemy to our magnificent timber districts, doing more even to deplete them than the hordes of lumbermen that penetrate them in all directions in search of trate them in all directions in search o the finest trees during the winter seaso

The Way to Blanket Horses. But few persons, comparatively, under stand how to apply a blanket to a horse to prevent him from contracting a cold. We frequently see the blanket folded, double and across the rump and part of the ani-mal's back, leaving those parts of the body which need protection entirely exposed to the cold.

Those parts of the body of a horse which surround the lungs require the benefit of a blanker in preference to its flanks and a blanket in preference to its flanks and ramp. When we are exposed to a current of cold air, to guard against any injury from contracting cold, we shield our shoulders, neck, chest and back. If these parts be protected, the lower part of the body will endure a degree of cold far more intense, without any injury to the body, than if the lungs were not kept warm with suitable coverwere not kept warm with suitable cover-ing. The same thing holds good on hor-bea. The blanket should cover the neck, withers and shoulders, and be brought around the breast and buttoned or buckled together as closely as a man buttons his overceat when about to face a driving storm. Let the lungs of a horse be well protected with a heavy blanket, and he will seldom take a cold, oven if the hindmost parts of his body are not covered. Many of our best teamsters protect the breasts of their horses by a piece of cloth about two feet square, hanging down from the lower end of the collar. This is an excellent practice in cold weather, as the most important part of the animal is constantly sheltered from the cold wind, established the cold wind, es after exercising sufficiently to produce per-spiration. So long as the horse is kept in motion, there is little danger of his suffer-motion, there is little danger of his suffer-ing from cold; but allow him to stand for class. Prices the lowest. few minutes, without a blanket to proteot his shoulders and lungs, and he will take cold sooner than men.—Exchange.
